

JAMES MCGREERY & CO.

China, Glass and Silverware.

A most elaborate stock of bric-a-brac, high art Bronzes, Potteries, Porcelains, Clocks, Lamps and Curios are now on exhibition.

Some of the most beautiful pieces are of Japanese Bronze, Silver Cloisonne, Sevres, Dresden, Hadley's Worcester or the curious "Koube" Bronze.

The Nouveau Art influence is shown in many of the tinted metal candlesticks, the bronze clocks and mountings for the exquisite Teplitz vases.

Buckhorn as liqueur stands, ink wells, etc. French glass set in gilt and silver floral frames, and numerous ornaments handsomely painted by well known artists are among the "objets d'art" that make the ideal wedding or congratulatory gift.

Sterling silver or fine plate-ware is introduced in many exclusive patterns, as are the dinner sets and household china.

The Cut Glass is unusually extensive in its variety and the quantity on exhibition. These designs are singularly handsome, mostly exclusive and extremely moderate in cost.

Such a display, except in the museum or art gallery, can hardly be duplicated.

Patrons are respectfully invited to make a visit of inspection.

AGED CARPENTER HANGS HIMSELF

Michael Schraut, One of the Characters of East Ninth Street, Broke Rule of Temperance and Ends Life.

AGED Michael Schraut, whose patriarchal face and figure made him one of the characters of the neighborhood in which he lived, was found hanging to a gas fixture to-day in the rear of his carpenter shop, at No. 428 East Ninth street. The body had been hanging since last Sunday.

Schraut moved into the basement of the East Ninth street house about seven months ago. He was alone in the world and his solitary life was accentuated by grief over the death of his wife. He lived quietly, never drank and was kind to the children on the block.

Through the window in the front of the basement Schraut could be seen daily bending over his carpenter tools. But his most familiar occupation was the early morning sweeping of his steps. Last Sunday, with broom in hand, he cleared the steps according to the daily custom. Then he was seen no more.

On Tuesday the janitress knocked at his door, but got no answer. Yesterday some of his neighbors peered through the keyhole in the rear of the shop where he slept, but everything was still as death. This morning a number of people gathered and pounded harder on the door. Some one in the crowd, looking through the keyhole, said:

"There he is, standing behind the door, listening to everything we are saying. The joke's on us of his steps. They battered down the door, however. Schraut was behind the door, suspended from the gas bracket, with rope around his neck.

People who have known him for years say that never before last Saturday did he drink. Then he made a day of it in his solitude.
